I.	The political crisis now center
	in the conservative ruling Libe	ral Democratic Party to select Kishi's successor.
	A. Ikeda, (no accent) minister	of international trade and indu ustry and a protege of former Prime Minister Yoshida (Yo-shee-da, no accent) is the leading contender, but still cannot command the support needed to hold the party together.

- If Ikeda fails in his bid to succeed Kishi at this time, prospects II. are that a compromise candidate will take over for the interim period before elections.
  - Leading candidates are Ono (Oh-no), vice president of the party and long-time political boss, and Ishii (E-shee), a party elder who accompanied Kishi on his visit to Washington to sign the new security treaty last January.
  - The conservatives are almost certain to meet public expectations for an early dissolution of the Diet and for general elections.
- III. Government leaders are thinking of holding such elections in the
